Bart Kessel is a trial lawyer experienced in all types of business litigation, with particular expertise in representing clients with claims involving technology issues, including patents, copyrights, trademarks, and trade secrets.

Bart's technical education, as well as his prior work experience as a software designer in the aerospace industry, forms the basis for his unique ability to simplify complicated technical concepts for judges and juries. In addition to his business litigation practice, Bart routinely defends clients in class actions involving claims of unfair competition and unfair trade practices.

Over the past 25 years, Bart has defended and prosecuted hundreds of cases both in California and a dozen other states. He serves as regional trial counsel for many of his clients, and he has tried cases to verdict in New York, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts, as well as in courts throughout California.
