Ethan Weber is a thoughtful strategist who helps clients navigate complex legal matters in trial and appellate courts across the country.

Ethan focuses on sophisticated legal issues and federal law, representing a diverse range of clients in high-stakes cases.

His experience includes defending corporations in class actions by developing tailored strategies to mitigate significant risks, resolving intricate commercial disputes across industries, and crafting persuasive briefs and oral arguments in trial and appellate courts. He also advises on, briefs, and argues issues related to jurisdiction, removal, Article III standing, constitutional questions, Daubert, and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Before joining Tucker Ellis, Ethan served as a law clerk to the Honorable J. Philip Calabrese (Northern District of Ohio) and the Honorable Douglas R. Cole (Southern District of Ohio). These roles provided him with invaluable insight into complex litigation and sharpened his ability to address challenging legal issues effectively.
