Hannah Smith is a litigator in the areas of white collar criminal defense, business litigation, and real estate litigation.

Hannah defends clients, both corporate and individuals, in matters involving fraud, public corruption, tax matters, RICO, and housing violations in state and federal court. Her experience includes extensive trial practice – having litigated nearly 70 trials – and appellate work. She dedicates part of her practice to land use and zoning, seeking to secure approval for clients and engage in litigation related to these issues. Hannah also represents nonprofit organizations including educational institutions on a wide variety of general and criminal matters.

Hannah joined Tucker Ellis after spending six years in the Cuyahoga County Prosecutor's Office as an assistant prosecuting attorney in the General Felony Division. She also gained experience arguing appellate issues at the Eighth District Court of Appeals.

While in law school, Hannah worked as an extern for the Civil Division of the United States Attorney's Office, preparing memoranda and motions on issues related to immigration, confidentiality, medical malpractice, and tax law. Previously, she served as a judicial extern for the Honorable Donald C. Nugent at the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio, where she gained valuable insight while observing jury trials, pretrial hearings, and status conferences.

In any free time she can muster, Hannah enjoys attending and participating in sporting events and hiking around Cleveland. She is an avid moviegoer and educates herself with random trivia knowledge and crosswords.
