

Health & Life Sciences M&A Transactions

Overview

At Tucker Ellis, we understand that the health and life sciences industry changes quickly, with frequent innovation propelling our clients toward remarkable outcomes. Many of our health and life sciences clients undertake mergers, acquisitions, and divestitures, as well as joint ventures and strategic alliances, as a critical part of their growth strategy. Our Health & Life Sciences Transactions team brings years of first-rate success in closing our clients' deals and navigating the regulatory landscape in these transactions. In all of our transactions, we apply our deep knowledge of the health and life sciences industry to achieve our clients' goals and objectives. We recognize that the constantly changing regulatory scheme in health and life sciences requires an intense commitment to compliance, and we have the multidisciplinary expertise necessary to guide our clients through the complex health and life sciences regulatory aspects of their transactions.

For our clients on the buy-side of M&A transactions, we often conduct a deep health care regulatory due diligence review of a target company to understand the strength of the target's compliance with applicable laws, such as the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, the Anti-Kickback Statute, the Stark Law, HIPAA, HITECH, and state licensure laws. We routinely assist our clients with assessing reimbursement trends and risks and partner with consultants to verify compliance with billing and coding laws. We make sure that any concerns identified in due diligence are appropriately addressed in the purchase agreement through representations and warranties, covenants, and indemnification provisions, and we collaborate with our clients to prepare an integration plan to remediate any concerns identified. When appropriate, we assist our clients to obtain representations and warranties insurance that covers certain health care risks in a deal.

On the sell-side, we facilitate transaction readiness by helping our clients build a sophisticated corporate compliance infrastructure so that a buyer is unable to effectively use compliance deficiencies to renegotiate pricing or other terms. Over the years, we have assisted numerous clients with adopting and appropriately implementing corporate compliance programs that are consistent with the Federal Sentencing Guidelines and guidance promulgated by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Office of the Inspector General. Our team also regularly advises boards of directors of health and life sciences companies on their role in overseeing the organization's compliance function.

For each deal, we evaluate the health and life sciences consents and notifications that are required to complete the transaction. We work closely with regulatory authorities to ensure that these consents are obtained promptly or that a compliant transitional services agreement is entered into so that the parties are able to close within their desired timeframe.

For clients who desire to partner with third parties, we routinely structure joint ventures and strategic alliances, either through the formation and operation of an entity as the joint venture vehicle or through structuring regulatorily compliant commercial contracts.

In many of these deals, we partner with our colleagues in our full-service Intellectual Property Department to assist clients with the creation, management, and enforcement of their intellectual property rights, including navigating situations in which intellectual property is cocreated by many parties.
